

Brushing Through The Trends

By Yvette Mancilla
yvette_mancilla

Students share perspectives on campus fashion and hairstyles

Depending on your type of hair, whether it's long and curly or short and straight, there are many different options on how to style it. Women can choose to have the long ombré look, a hair color that starts dark at the top of the hairline and then gets lighter in color toward the ends. Men can choose to grow their hair out and throw it up with a hair tie or rock a cleaner cut with a fade haircut. More than 20,000 students attend Fresno State, bringing many different tastes in fashion and hair, as well as similarities. Several students shared what they think the rest of campus has to offer in terms of hairstyles and offered their own preferences for go-to looks.

Photos by Katie Eleneke • The Collegian

Jacqueline Aguilar

Senior Juan Garcia, a chemistry major, said he looks to his favorite actors for style inspiration, but keeps his own fashion and hair styles pretty ordinary.

"I look toward television and film actors that are my favorite for tastes," Garcia said. "But I usually keep it normal or sometimes go for something a little new. I don't use too many products, just a comb to style."

Garcia said he's looking forward to warmer weather so he can wear more loose, comfortable clothing.

"I'll definitely be wearing shorts and tank tops with some designs on them," Garcia said.

Juan Garcia

James Dadasovich

Savannah Summers, an agriculture communications major, said she has her family genes to thank for easy, manageable hair.

"I have to thank my dad for my hair, because it's the wavy beach hair," Summers said. "So it's easy to maintain."

For her fashion sense is a combination of dressy and casual depending on how much energy she has to style herself.

"There's the dressy side of me that has a thousand dresses and skirts," Summers said. "But then I just wear cute casual wear with a T-shirt, jeans and a jacket."

Savannah Summers

Miracle Banks

Evan Harley, an undeclared freshman, tends to have a more laid-back look for both hair and wardrobe.

"I suggest whatever you think looks good, go for it," Harley said. "I tend to throw whatever I see on. My style is more casual-wear."

Harley applies this laid back look for his hair without using any particular products to style.

"I don't use anything too crazy," Harley said. "I just shampoo regularly and use conditioner occasionally."

Evan Harley

Miracle Banks, a sophomore physics major, said even though there's a slight downside to having long, full hair, she recommends that others stick with their individual styles despite what others may think.

"My hair can be a handful to deal with," Banks said. "It can take an hour or two because it's very long and thick. Friends can sometimes be mean about whether or not your hairstyle looks good on you or not, but don't let anyone tell you what they want."

"There's some interesting characters at Fresno State," Banks said. "I wouldn't worry about it too much."